EDITORIAL

The first issue of the Bulletin in the new millenium finds it in a healthy state. Once again several authors have contributed interesting survey articles, and a small backlog for future volumes has started to build up. As the profile is increasing space for good articles becomes more competitive and the time until publication may increase as well. We will, however, strive to keep the time between submission of an article and, once it is accepted, its publication to a minimum.

Some of the other new features of the Bulletin have also started to pick up. The section on Departmental News, for example, is somewhat more substantial this time, and we hope that departments will continue to keep the Bulletin informed on important developments. The same applies to announcements of conferences. The Editor is not in a position to go fishing for announcements; but those that come in in good time and contain the relevant information will certainly be published as soon as possible.

The overall layout is still somewhat unchanged and may remain so for the immediate future. Suggestions and ideas to the Editor on this are very welcome, as are comments on the Bulletin in general.
